When you try to resolve a complaint against a company, the first step should always be to discuss your concerns with a representative of the business. Try talking to the manager or owner, and tracking by sending a certified letter confirming all the details of your call. Request a return mail receipt so that you have proof of delivery of the letter; and keep records of all communications between you and your business, including phone calls, letters, faxes or e-mail messages. Here's an example of a letter you can use to send to your business. If you're following a previous call, be sure to repeat all the promises made to you at the same time. If you can't find an answer to your question, please feel free to contact us. Need help? Contact support You can represent yourself. Each shape is different to each state or county, but usually an answer is simply a written document that presents a summary of your story to the court. The answer is not your defense, just a written notice to the court that you intend to appeal the lawsuit. The blank forms are available in the court clerk's office and are more or less obvious and will be a place calling for the signature of a lawyer. You have to sign your name on the space and write the words Pro se after your signature. It lets the court know you're acting as your lawyer. It doesn't sound like you understand how PHP handles forms. The usual scenario is to display an HTML page containing the form to the user. The action attribute of the starting form tag specifies the Web page that will process the submitted form (and confirm to the user that they did so). The form processing page will contain PHP code to do what you need to do with the contents of the form. For example, it will typically store the information in a server-side database, such as MySQL. It can also send an e-mail to someone. If you want to provide the user with a download, editable form, you can do it by having a PHP create PDF with the data sent I can't imagine why you want to do it, but it is possible. It's better to ask homeschooling in your own country. Every country has different rules. What works in one can't work another. This looks like the information you need: Message of Intent (NOI) I had an experience with Bing and Google to stop using our brand name in the competitor's ads, in both cases I used an online form to contact Bing and Google ad approval teams. The responses of Bing and Google representatives were really quick, it took less than 2 business days. Another solution is to create a special set of keywords and ads that contain your brand name and offer a higher than average price in those keywords. So when a person searches for your brand product, the first thing that pops up is your ad. Therefore, you can brand your competitors. Besides, if you have sellers or partners, you can set special rules for them and prohibit online advertising on brand keywords.
